

Duties of Guardianship: Keeping Good Records

It takes a lot of organization to make sure you've got all the information you need to fill out the required forms for lay (non-professional) guardianship. The following tips come from parents who offer some good ideas for saving a little time and frustration when those guardianship reports are due.

- 📁 Consider purchasing a simple record and accounting software program, such as Excel or Quicken. At the very least, record all expenses paid and reimbursements made in a record-keeping book. Keep all your receipts.
- 📁 Organize proposed budget and expenditures by category, such as: medical, food, transportation, entertainment, rent, utilities, and purchases that don't fit into other categories (e.g., furniture or credit card payments). Find out what your county requires.
- 📁 Make a copy of everything submitted to the court. When it is time to renew the guardianship, you'll know which forms you need to download and what additional information you need to submit.
- 📁 Report significant changes in income or expenses to the court when they occur. You'll need the court's approval to update or revise a budget.
- 📁 Prepare your court reports. Initial and annual reports must be filed within 90 days after the date you were appointed guardian.
- 📁 Check with your county court for the due date of your report.

We had a shoe box full of receipts with check numbers on every single receipt for everything we've ever spent. That's not good enough.

You need to have it listed where you can just go in and quickly access it, otherwise it's going to take hours and hours.
