

Become an Alternative Living provider in Washington state

What does an AL (Alternative Living) provider do?

An AL provider supports clients living in their own home or in their parent's home. As an AL provider, you will support the client's goals in learning new skills or keeping existing ones such as establishing a residence, home living, health and safety, self-protection, advocacy, and living in a community.

What are the benefits of being an AL provider?

Being an AL provider allows you to be your own boss and set your schedule of when you would like to work. This is great for someone who is looking to pick up extra hours of work around an existing job, enjoys working with someone on new skills, having fun and variety in their day, and wants to make a positive impact in their community.
